WINS SILVER MEDAL

J. PURMAN BENNETT, GLENDALE'S REPRESENTATIVE, IN SECOND PLACE

In spite of the many attractions of the festival a goodly number of Glendale people went to South Pasadena last night to root for J. Purman Bennett, Glendale High's representative in the oratorical contest. The contestants in this event were the winners in the Interurban contest held in Glendale two weeks ago and also the winners in the contest held between the high schools of Los Angeles.

Those who contended for the loving cup awarded by the University of California were Mr. Ankrum of the Los Angeles high school, whose subject was "The Promise of Socialism;" Miss Brown of Lincoln High School who spoke on "The Canal Builder, Col. Goethals;" Carlos Alvear, a young Filippino, who took for his theme, "The Independence of the Philippines;" and J. Purman Bennett of Glendale, whose oration was on "Peace and our Foreign Policy."

The orations were all very excellent and very much worth while. The judges were placed in a very difficult position as very unusual conditions arose from the fact that the contestants were so evenly matched. Bennett was given first place by three of the judges and second place by one. The Filipino lad was not given first place by any of the judges, but he received so many seconds that in the final accounting he won first place. Glendale was second while Los Angeles high and Lincoln high tied for third place.

The judges of composition and thought were the heads of the English departments of the University of Southern California, Occidental and Throop. The judges of delivery were Superior Judge Shenk of Los Angeles, Prof. Henkey of the University of California at Berkeley and Mr. Hanson of the San Pedro high school. The judges of composition and thought gave Bennett first place.

However, Pasadena carried off the loving cup and the gold medal, Glendale bringing home the silver medal, which is no slight honor. The Glendale people who attended the contest were proud of their representative and feel that he did honor to the school. Those who have heard him before say he never did so well as he did last night. Many compliments were heard for the Los Angeles High School representative also, and his rooters went home very much disappointed.

PIANO RECITAL

Those who are acquainted with the excellent record Miss Helena Constance Morgan has made for herself as a pianist will be delighted to have an opportunity of hearing her again. Miss Morgan will give a recital in Tropico Methodist church on Tuesday evening. The following interesting program will be played:

Rondo a Capriccioso, Beethoven; Toccata, Paradisi; Gigue, Loeilly-McDowell; Sonata, Scarlatt; Berceuse, Chopin; Nocturne, Opus 9, No. 1, Faschingschwank, Schuman. This latter piece is a Vienna carnival scene and is divided into five parts as follows: 1, allegro; 2, Romanza; 3, Scherzino; 4, intermezzo; 5, finale.

IN ANTELOPE VALLEY

Two auots left Los Angeles early this morning picking up passengers en route, completing their complement at Sixth and Central avenue, Glendale, adding to their number Mr. E. A. Carvel and Mr. William Jarrett. The destination of the party is the Llano Del Rio colony in Antelope valley, one of the most delightful drives of about 100 miles, either by way of Bouquet or Mint canyons. At this period of the year good roads are to be found every foot of the journey. There are about 350 people at the colony, and many visitors drop in on them, especially at the week end; so they arrange to have a royal time each Saturday evening, when the last twelve hours of the day are devoted to baseball, tennis, athletic sports and speechmaking, concluding with an old-fashioned dance in the commodious club house.

DUNHAMS TO GO EAST

Mr. and Mrs. E. Dunham of 642 North Louise, who have resided in Glendale for the past six years, are planning to take a trip to their old home in Marne, Iowa, leaving within the next few weeks, unless something unforeseen occurs to prevent. Mrs. Dunham has children living at Marne and these good people anticipate much pleasure from their coming trip.

AL J. JENNINGS HERE

REFORMED BANDIT AND CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR TO SPEAK TOMORROW

Al. J. Jennings is in California to recuperate from the effects of a strenuous political campaign in which he was an unsuccessful candidate for governor of Oklahoma, and —to teach the doctrine of the Golden Rule from the standpoint of an ex-convict, and will speak in Glendale tomorrow.

Stranger than fiction is the story of Al Jennings' career. Many persons have followed the vicissitudes of Jean Valjean, the character created by Victor Hugo, who redeemed himself after a convict's career, but who was hounded and persecuted by society almost to the end of his life.

Al Jennings is a new Valjean. He has to deal with a less ferocious police and penal organization than that of France in the time of which Hugo wrote. Valjean had to hide his identity to escape being returned to prison to complete his long sentence.

Doubtless the career of this man is a puzzle to many people. Most men who have been fortunate enough to regain a standing in society after imprisonment are anxious to lead quiet lives that do not tend to stir up reference to their past history. Not so with Al Jennings. He has made a fight in which he has not been deterred when men insulted him because of his past. Two years ago when Jennings had about decided to become a candidate for prosecuting attorney at Oklahoma City even his friends advised against such a step.

"You can't be nominated, Al," they said to him, "and it will cast a kind of reflection on the ticket, you know, to have you in the race."

But Jennings was obdurate and announced himself as a candidate. His platform was worth reading:

"In announcing myself as a candidate for county attorney of Oklahoma county I beg to say that it is not without mature and serious thought that I have done so. I have thought over all that might be objectionable. I have raked through the gray dead ashes of the past. I have taken a retrospective glance into the dark recesses of the days that are gone, and I am willing that God's sunlight be turned full upon every act of my past life.

"I have never willingly deceived anybody; I have never betrayed a trust nor violated a confidence, and I would not deny the truth of my past for any office within the gift of the people. I would rather have my record in its blackest hue than be pointed out as a public 'grafter,' official 'crook' or embezzler who had violated his oath and prostituted the trust imposed upon him by the people.

"I am offering myself for what I am worth today and may be prove to be worth in the future.

"If the people are willing to confide to my care the office of county attorney of Oklahoma county I pledge my word and honor that I will send the men who have embezzled your money and violated their oaths of office to the penitentiary. I shall strike at violators of the law, be they of high or low degree, without fear or favor, and I will save the taxpayers thousands of dollars now wasted in useless prosecutions."

Told Story of His Life

Jennings opened his campaign with a street corner speech in the downtown district of Oklahoma City. Nearly five thousand people stood on their feet more than an hour to hear him. He began at the beginning and told the story of his life, train robberies and all. He was not elected, but he came close to it.

Characteristic of the man was his reply to the criticisms evoked by the publication of the story of his life.

"There isn't money enough in the United States to make me parade a crime story in a magazine," said Jennings, "and those who have accused me of doing a wrong by publishing the story of my life are unjust in their accusations, for the story contains a moral that will, I hope, cause boys who are inclined to be lawless to gain at my expense."

Physically, Jennings is a little man, not much over five feet in height, with a shock of curly, red hair, who from his appearance might teach violin lessons or sell typewriters. He lacks the fierce countenance, the glittering eye, the size and swagger usually associated with a typical bad man, and, at first sight looks like a meek, mild-mannered little man, who, if smote upon one cheek would immediately turn the other. But with a second glance at a pair of cold blue eyes that hold a glint like polished steel, set in a face impassive as an iron mask above a determined mouth and a fighting jaw, one begins to understand how

CHILDREN MAKE FLAG

UNDER LEADERSHIP OF MISS MIDCALF PRESENT BANNER TO VETERANS

The fourth Friday of each month is one of especial pleasure and happiness for the members of N. P. Banks for then they hold an all-day meeting and the members of the Woman's Relief Corps are present and contribute to the happiness of these "old boys" by furnishing a delightful program and serving a most delicious lunch at the noon hour. Yesterday was no exception to the rule. The large banquet hall was most artistically decorated in Shasta daisies and the menu was everything that could be desired from an epicurean's view. Following luncheon, Post Commander G. W. Sanford assembled the members and guests in the auditorium and after singing America, introduced Gen. A. J. Sampson of Arizona, who gave a most interesting address, which was not only amusing, but was well rounded with true patriotism and unswerving loyalty to his country and his country's flag.

Mrs. Flora Pixley, past president of N. P. Banks Corps, announced a most pleasant surprise for the large assembly. Mrs. William M. Crawford, who was seated at the piano, played the Star Spangled Banner as Major J. J. Weiler with the N. P. Banks Rifles, composed of J. B. Hickman, R. D. Goss, H. M. Goss, H. S. West, R. N. Taylor, A. J. Thayer and U. Emick, with their rifles and true military step marched into the hall and up to the platform, where they stood at attention as Miss Clara Midcalf, teacher of the seventh grade of the intermediate school, entered the hall, followed by Margaret Crawford, Glenn Moore, Dorothy Patterson, Frances Smith, Edwin Hambley, Forrest Jordan and Maxwell Tuttle, who marched past the Rifles as an escort and upon the platform. Margaret Crawford was carrying a facsimile of the first flag made by Betsy Ross. Thirteen stripes and a circle of thirteen stars on a blue field. Miss Midcalf gave a most stirring and patriotic talk. She told that she has 45 boys and girls in her history class and one of her ideas of teaching patriotism was to give practical effect to the lessons taught so she had these 45 children each assist in making a flag. No happier children were there than those 45 who with love of their flag worked unceasingly on the starry banner. Miss Midcalf told how difficult a task it was to select the children to come and present the flag to the Post, as all wanted the privilege and the honor. Then another problem was who should carry the banner, but finally it was decided as Margaret Crawford's mother, Mrs. W. M. Crawford, is a member of the W. R. C., and her grandfather, Rev. J. H. Henry, past commander of the Post that to this dear little bright girl should be given the honor, and how proudly she bore that banner aloft! As Glenn Moore is closely related to a member of the Sons of Veterans he made the presentation speech, presenting to the post the flag which he and his classmates had wrought with so much pride and patriotism. Cheer after cheer rent the air as this clever lad, whose speech was original, had finished. Then these seven young happy-faced children repeated the flag salute. Gen. Sampson repeated an ode to the American flag and Miss Cora Hickman responded to Miss Midcalf's address. N. P. Banks Post and Corps all gave the flag salute and Rev. C. R. Norton accepted the flag for the post. A rising vote of thanks was given Miss Midcalf and the children, she for the beautiful conception of teaching patriotism and the children for so beautifully working out the idea of their loved teacher. A large bouquet of sweet peas was then distributed among all as a happy memento of an occasion that will ever linger with tender memories as one of the happiest enjoyed in G. A. R. hall, where fraternity, charity and loyalty are the countersigns.

Mrs. Louise Purnell, Mrs. Elizabeth Kasseall and Mrs. Samuel A. Pollock and son, Allen Pollock, with Mr. Thomas Morgan driving Mrs. Parnell's car motored to Hollywood this morning and joined the big auto procession on the new boulevard. It was a most unique and happy celebration with the official opening of this grand scenic road through Topanga.

Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Pratt, Mr. and Mrs. George C. Grisso, Mr. and Mrs. Abel Duffur and Mrs. Susie Ogier of Burbank, Mrs. Hettie B. Williams and Mrs. Louis Hoffman of Ocean Park attended the all-day meeting of N. P. Banks Post and Corps.

The memorial sermon will be delivered by Comrade W. C. Gibbons in G. A. R. hall Sunday afternoon at

MERRY MINSTRELS

DUSKY BEAUTIES REVEL IN WIT, HUMOR AND SONG AT THE "RUMPUS" LAST NIGHT

When the curtain disclosed the stage at "The Minstrel Tea in a Flower Garden" in the auditorium of the High School last night the audience greeted with hearty applause the gathering of dusky beauties who, dressed as sunflowers, formed a striking background to the scene. As the interlocutor, Mrs. A. W. Tower, took her position in the center of the stage, supported by the "end girls," Mrs. O. W. Tarr, Mrs. George Neil, Mrs. W. E. Evans, Miss Arleen Hallihan, Mrs. Harry Goodwin, Mrs. C. T. Van Etten, Mrs. R. W. Meeker and Miss Edith Booth, and the full chorus, taken from the opera, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," gave evidence of the developed talent of the entire company, the greeting extended by the people who about half filled the hall was generous and prolonged.

It seems a pity that so much real talent should have been presented to so limited an audience, but as the people of Glendale appear to have settled in their own minds that the entrance prices were too high, the clever production of the ladies of the Tuesday Afternoon club and their friends suffered considerably. It is to be hoped that tonight's audience will make up for the disappointment.

The "end girls" gave a characteristic darkey song, "Night Time in Dixieland," which was ended with really humorous dancing. The gestures and little bylays were clever and irresistibly funny.

Mrs. John Orth, studiously dressed in violet costume and with a huge bunch of violets in her arms, sang the beautiful old ballad, "Every Day I Bring Thee Violets." The sweet song received at Mrs. Orth's hands as sweet an interpretation.

Between the songs and choruses the "end girls," following the regular style of the old minstrels, indulged in witty talk and repartee. A specimen of wit with a local tinge was as follows:

End Girl—Do you know that Adam and Eve live in Glendale?

Interlocutor—You don't tell me?

End Girl—Yaas; they have a telephone number.

Interlocutor—In the telephone book? What is it?

End Girl—2 8 1 Apple.

The audience was convulsed at the information cunningly given that the proper shortening for a lady's skirt was "above two feet."

A sly hit was made at some of Glendale's celebrities, to the delight of the audience.

The coon stunt, "Run, Brudder Rabbit, Run," sung by Ragged Robin, Mrs. R. W. Meeker, was an immense success. Mrs. Meeker was "bred in Old Kentucky" and can imitate the darkey girl to the life.

"Lovey Joe," sung by Miss Edith Booth and Miss Arleen Hallihan, with the other "end girls" and chorus assisting, was received with great applause.

Mrs. H. E. McMullin, who represented the Shasta daisy, the official flower of the festival, gave a perfect rendering of the beautiful song, "The Shasta Daisy." She was accompanied by her daughter. Then the girls and the chorus led by Mrs. George Neil rendered one of the taking songs of the evening, "Gasoline Gus." The whistling accompaniment whistled by the suflower darkies was specially effective and occasioned several encores.

In the charming ballad, "My Baby Rose," Mrs. Fred Pigg showed her sweet and well trained voice to great advantage. Her pink costume with its appropriate adornments and the bouquet of Dorothy Perkins roses which she carried lent additional charm to the song. She was loudly applauded and responded to the calls of the audience.

In the Ethiopian novelty, "The 5-15," Mrs. Harry Goodwin and Mrs. W. E. Evans made a great hit. Just about this time one of the girls got off the joke: "Do you know that Jess Willard is the champion candymaker of the United States?' "Why?" "Because he made a 200-pound chocolate drop." Another girl in the course of an entertaining story told how she had been asked, her appearance warranting the question, "Have you been in swimming?" and answered, "No, I've been eating water melon."

Several solos were sung by Mrs. Herman West, formerly of the Metropolitan, New York City. Mrs. West, attired in appropriate costume as Madame Orange Tree, rendered "Old Black Joe," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," and other negro melodies with great effect.

"Safety First" by Mrs. C. T. Van Etten was a scream from its laughable beginning to the dramatic fin-

CONSULT THE PEOPLE

One of the most common mistakes made by both men and women who serve on public committees in connection with all manner of public work and public functions is to imagine that the authority they are permitted to exercise is their own, whereas it is merely delegated to them. In this respect they are not one whit better than the old machine politicians, whose motto was: "The people be damned."

This cavalier commendation of the people to perdition passed in the old days of Boss Tweed of New York City; it was beginning to get out of vogue in the days of Boss Croker, and became completely discredited about the time Roosevelt was police commissioner in New York City. Every now and then, however, the old spirit creeps into public life and every time it does you can hear the murmur of the crowd.

It is a far cry from Boss Tweed to Glendale's Festival of Fruits and Flowers, yet even here some of the old spirit manifests itself. It appears from what a large section of the public is saying that there has been a tendency to ignore the right of the public to be considered in such an affair as the three days' festival. The result has been a fixing of prices for admission to the various affairs on the program at rates beyond what would have been fair to everyone.

In setting prices of admission to the various events of the three days' festival it should not have been forgotten that families in these days are apt to consider fifty cents a prohibitive price for admission to a children's operetta, and twenty-five cents a prohibitive tariff for entrance to a flower show. It might not be so bad were there not three days of the festival. Very little reflection would have made it manifest to any intelligence that there are not many ordinary families in Glendale that could contemplate with indifference the expenditure of the sum necessary to take in every event in the three days with, say, six persons.

That this reasoning is right must have been manifest Friday night to those in charge of the children's "coronation" exercises. The auditorium was at no time more than half full. It should have had "standing room only" long before the hour set for its commencement, and would have had if the prices had been twenty-five and ten cents. The flower show in like manner would have been filled with enthusiastic crowds at fifteen and ten cents.

In such cases the public is the ultimate tribunal. If they did not attend as they should, it is evident that the prices were too high; and there can be no argument on that point. The festival is a people's affair and they are expected to pay for it; therefore, they are entitled to have their wishes consulted. In all popular functions the people must be consulted and their wishes catered to or success cannot be expected. This is the era of popular rule.

ITALY'S ONWARD MARCH

In its campaign against Austria, Italy is displaying an energy that might have been expected. The Italian troops are fresh and enthusiastic—the armies of Austria are worn and jaded after their long campaign. In the course of their triumphal sweep toward Trieste the soldiers of Victor-Emmanuel are exhibiting a dash and spirit that promise ere long to carry them to the accomplishment of their aim—the recovery of their lost provinces.

It is inevitable that this new offensive against the Germanic allies will prove a vital factor in the war. Germany fully understands the seriousness of the new conditions. Austria must send troops to defend its territory or suffer the occupation of the Trentino by the Italians.

To offset this new development, it is reported that Germany has sent officers with money and presents to the tribal chiefs in Tripoli to induce them to inaugurate a war against the Italian forces there that will compel Italy to divert some part at least of its troops to defend its North African province. Instead of the end of the war being in sight, it seems to be spreading on all hands.

Writing in the year 1872, Victor Hugo, the great French novelist and publicist, said: "Even as light is composed of seven colors, civilization is composed of seven people. Of these Greece, Italy and Spain represent the South; England, Germany and Russia the North; the seventh and the first is France, at once north and south, Celtic and Latin, Gothic and Grecian.

"One day, and one not far distant, the seven nations which compose all humanity shall mix and mingle like the seven prismatic colors in one radiant bow in the heavens; the prodigy of peace will appear visible and eternal, high above civilization, and the astonished and dazzled world will contemplate the gigantic rainbow of the United Peoples of Europe."

What would the great Frenchman have thought of his prophecy had he lived to see the German armies engaged in their recent rush on Paris and had witnessed the present savage conflict of the disunited nations of the European continent.

The world is seemingly a long way from the much-desired era of peace. Even after the present war shall have ceased, can the nations of the world look for a cessation of fighting? Europe is not the only possible battleground of armies and war is proving even more savage now than it ever was.

With all its initiative and preparation and courage, Italy will find that it has a long way to go and many battles to fight before it beholds the star of peace returning from behind the clouds of war. The men who direct the counsels of Italy might well have pondered the proverb of the eastern sage, "Undertake nothing of which thou hast not well considered the end."

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR

Sunday, May 30, topic, "The Call of Foreign Missions for Money, Men and Prayers." Hag. 2:4-9.

Seed Notes

To be an appreciative Christian in these enlightened days, days of blessing and glorious privilege, means a willingness to share with our fellowman, whether he lives across the street or the seas. Our larger blessings demand a corresponding larger ob'igation to others. "Withholding more than is meet" has ever "tended to poverty" of mind, soul and store. We always lose by keeping. Always gain by giving. God would enrich the Christians of all Christendom by demanding from them, men, money and prayers. He knows the secret of their enlarged blessings and success. A knowledge of missionary needs ought to receive a glad response on the part of those who are God's children.

An Encouragement

The fact that more men and money are demanded by missions to their success ought to be proof enough to the most skeptical the work is growing, opportunities enlarging and God is answering the earnest prayers of his people. It is good news how our investments are yielding splendid returns instead of our comp'aining and distrust.

Difficulties

The present European war is the chief hindrance against missions and success. Many godly and pious men and women must withdraw from very successful fields. No money to carry it forward. War and missions do not agree. Already the loss and waste in the loss of battleships would build thousands of educational institutions. The financial waste in munitions of war, destruction of property and the like, would educate and Christianize more than entire heathen Africa. They look at the hatred and national repugnance engendered working its way into every avenue of European interest. Nothing but the love of Christ and brotherly interest through him will stop it.

Three Great Needs

They should be placed in reverse order, for when prayer is lively and importunate, all the rest will follow. Prayer for missions will give you a desire to go or send. It will consecrate more laborers. It will dedicate more dollars. And if the church will give until it feels it, and then continue until it doesn't feel it, men will be willing to offer their lives to missions. Spiritual blessings will flow when the true spirit of the master becomes enthroned upon us who stay, upon those who go and upon our possessions they will be showered.

speak on "The Versions of the Bible."

"What is the Treacle Bible?"

"What is the Printer's Bible?"

"What is the Breeches Bible?"

These and other interesting questions will be answered.

Those attending these sermon-lectures on the Bible are commending them very highly. This is a good opportunity for the people to get a wider and deeper knowledge of the Bible.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Rev. J. C. Worley, recently from Japan and Korea, will show an original set of stereopticon slides from these countries, the explanation of which will be of more than ordinary interest to young people at the evening service tomorrow at 7:30. Mr. Worley is speaking to large audiences up and down this coast, and will no doubt be greeted with a large crowd tomorrow evening. All are invited.

Rev. W. H. Cornett, pastor of First Presbyterian church, Santa Monica, will exchange pulpits with the pastor tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock. Sermon topic, "The Part We Know Now." Tomorrow will be general exchange day throughout Los Angeles presbytery. The pastor will return and preside at the evening service.

BIG PROGRAM AT BAPTIST CHURCH

The pastor of the First Baptist church will preach as usual Sunday morning, taking as his theme, "Looking Forward." The text will be found in Phil. 3:13-14. "Brethren, I count not myself to have apprehended, but this one thing I do, forgetting those things which are behind, and reaching forth unto those things which are before, I press toward the mark of the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Visitors to our beautiful city of Glendale are especially welcome to all of the services of the Baptist church. Good spiritual music under the able leadership of Mr. C. H. Cunningham. Miss Maud Salisbury, well known for her talent at the piano, will continue in her usual position to delight and inspire with her art.

Al. J. Jennings, the most picturesque personality in Oklahoma, has agreed to deliver a fifteen minute talk to young men in connection with the Sunday evening gospel service. This great character is nationally famous and it is hoped that the local churches will be well represented at his afternoon lecture. His story is a thriller and every man and boy should hear him. The announcement of his engagements in this city appear elsewhere in the columns of the News.

Al. Jennings' fifteen minute talk will be followed by a message from Rev. Troy on the "Genius of Christianity." This sermon will be worth hearing.

The Baptist Gospel Team will continue the open air service, corner of Brand and Broadway. Brown and Curry songs will be used and all are welcome. Much good is being accomplished by these services.

Sunday school as usual at 9:30. Mr. Roy Kent in charge. B. Y. P. U. at 6:30. A live meeting. Baptismal service at the evening hour of worship.

ish of each verse by the end girls and the chorus. Mrs. Morris Cook, who represented the Japanese wisteria, looked charmingly Japanese in a beautiful kimona and obi and sang in the most cunning Japanese style "Back to Tokio." She was enthusiastically applauded and encored. Mrs. Cook is a cousin of Blanche Bates of "The Darling of the Gods" fame. The chorus to this song was sung with great effect, the stage being darkened and the sunflower girls waving pretty Japanese lanterns.

"Listen to that Dixie Band" by Mrs. O. W. Tarr was given with excellent effect and earned a well-deserved encore. Mrs. D. E. Shadrach, as the Poppy, sang a new state ballad entitled "California," which was well received. "My Honeysuckle Gal" by Arleen Hallihan, was characterized by life, spirit and just the necessary amount of negro abandon to make it perfect. It was quite a triumph for Miss Hallihan.

The first part of the program was brought to an end by a laughable sketch, replete with originality, entitled "The Wonderful Telephone." Mrs. A. W. Tower, Mrs. W. E. Evans and Mrs. Harry Goodwin participated in this riot of fun with its local hits and amusing pantomime.

This brought the first part of the show to a close and Mrs. Mattison B. Jones reminded the audience that there was more to come, as the hour was getting late and some imagined that the program was finished. The blowing out of a fuse in the first part of the evening had delayed the show at least 45 minutes. This was unfortunate, but the audience was good natured and the show's excellence kept them from feeling tired. The second part of the program opened with a burlesque entitled "The Tuesday African club." This was a species of satirical imitation of the proceedings of the Tuesday Afternoon club. Some of the members of that august body had the pleasure of seeing themselves as others see them. The satire, however, was good natured and amusing.

One of the most charming of the numbers was the dancing of a minuet entitled "The Old-Fashioned Girl," by Dorothy McGinnis and Lois Naudain. The two children were charming in their simplicity. Dressed in the style of our grandfathers and grandmothers the little ones gave much pleasure to the audience by the gravity of their dancing and the sweetness of their deportment.

Miss Naum Herron's monologue was omitted on account of the lateness of the evening. Terese Van Grove gave a clever interpretative dance, "The Child of Nature." This was a very clever performance and commanded the applause and admiration of the audience. Mrs. Morris Cook in "The Chinese Blues," not only looked the part of a Chinese beauty to perfection, but also sang and acted with great cleverness. Her act was cleverly staged.

The finale was a patriotic musical medley by High School girls who acted as the dusky beauties of the show in the chorus. As these sweet and wholesome American girls marched on to the stage they were received with much applause. They sang the repertoire of American national songs and marched with a fine military swing. Their evolutions were interesting and at the close Master Shadrach, dressed as Uncle Sam, took the center of the stage with the American flag amid great applause.

The high-school girls who took part in the chorus and patriotic parade were: Merra Scott, Frances Williams, Gertrude Thorpe, Joyce Downing, Hazel Flower, Margaret Boucher, Blanche Cramer, Esther Schremp, Carol Floss, Katharine Renshaw, Pauline Edwall, Margaret McPherson, Mary Hunt, Myrtle Tummel. Caroline Watling, Dorothy Hunt, Evangeline Hunchberger, Muriel Turner, Jane Smythe. Lucile Barnes, Nettie Werve, Marion Lane, Virginia McMasters, Edna Tichenor, Elizabeth Mason, Macila Miller, Marian Gambler, Gladys Mason, Winifred Jones, Helen McMillan.

Mrs. Wayland Brown deserves great credit for her excellent work as director. Her patience and ability in that line were amply rewarded last night.

Miss Alpha Prindle, who acted as accompanist throughout the better part of the evening, manifested great gifts in that capacity. Her accompaniments were invariably toned down to bring out the light and shade of the singing and she was quite a considerable factor in the abounding success of the evening. Mrs. J. R. Barrows also aided greatly in making the show a success by her accompaniments on the piano. The show will be repeated tonight and should draw the crowds.

H. A. Wilson and family spent Saturday on Mount Baldy at Carter's camp.

A GOOD TIME

The beginning of what is to be a monthly celebration of all the birthdays of the members of the Presbyterian Baraca class, came off Friday night at the home of Rev. Edmonds. The ladies of the two Philathea classes were among those present and all told, the company numbered some sixty odd persons. The evening was spent in lively games and guessing contests, after which dainty refreshments were served by the host. Following this the four young men whose birthdays are in May — Ray Morrow, Clarence Klum, Paul Pierce and Jesse Flower — were presented with a Baraca emblem in the form of a gold scarf pin from M. P. Harrison, the class father.

acquired the reputation of being the most dangerous man behind the gun this small specimen of humankind in the days when human life was a cheap commodity and personal misunderstandings were followed by the "ping" of a bullet or the swish of a knife.

Jennings is a natural story teller. In fact, it has been said of him that every time he opens his mouth he utters a short story classic. This is literally true. The man's fund of experience is so rich, his narrative instinct so strong, that he could fill a thousand and one nights with entertainment that would charm a caliph or enthrall a king.

Friend of O. Henry

At one point in his outlaw career, when he was flush with money and the southwest Jennings went to Central America. It was there he met Sidney Porter, who was later to become famed as O. Henry. Porter was down on his luck and Jennings staked him to more money than he had ever seen up to that time. They were together several months and when they parted Jennings returned to the scene of his train robbing activities in Oklahoma. They remained fast friends, however, until the death of the author. Many of the incidents of Jennings' career are embodied in the writings of O. Henry, and mathings were getting hot for him in terial for the prison story which he was writing at the time of his death was given to him by the outlaw.

Al. J. Jennings—his name was Alphonso, but he cut out the last two syllables when he went to Oklahoma to keep them from being shot off—is a Virginian by birth and a graduate of the University of West Virginia. His father came to Missouri soon after the war and then moved to Oklahoma, where Al. joined the family when he was through college.

When he was little more than a boy Jennings was elected county attorney of Canadian county. This was in 1890. He was re-elected in 1892. After his second term of office had expired he went to Woodward, Oklahoma, to visit his brothers, Frank and Ed, who were practicing law there.

While at Woodward Jennings was employed in a case there and it was this incident that led to his career as an outlaw. Temple Houston, son of General Sam Houston, and himself a picturesque character of the southwest, had for a client an ex-sheriff named Love, but the case concerned the possession of a drove of cattle. Jennings' client had possession and he advised him to get the cattle over the line and out of the jurisdiction of the court. Houston charged Jennings with unprofessional conduct and animadverted on his ability as a lawyer. There was the usual interchange of professional discourtesies and finally Houston said Jennings did not know the law.

"You are a liar," retorted Jennings.

"You are a——," but what Houston called Jennings is immaterial to the story.

Both were known as bad men, and when they pulled their guns, bench and bar unlimbered their dignity and ducked. Ed. Jennings, who was standing between the belligerents, reached up—he, too, was a little man—and slapped Houston's face. That was the limit. According to the border code a killing was overdue, but Al Jennings, who felt himself responsible for the trouble, said if his brothers would go to their office and stay there he would hunt Houston up the next morning and see if mutual apologies could not be arranged. But John and Ed. Jennings entered a saloon for a glass of beer before turning in and there was an encounter with Houston and Love, in which Ed. Jennings was killed and John was wounded. Frank Jennings, another brother, came back from Denver, and as soon as John was out of danger Frank and Al started on a man hunt.

There were no melodramatic oaths of vengeance, but they gave up their business and camped on Houston's trail with the relentless silence and persistence of bloodhounds. For two years they tracked him through Oklahoma, Texas and Indian Territory, and once followed him into Mexico. Only twice did they sight their man and then they could have "gotten" him but he was with women and they spared his life.

"I didn't want to murder this man," says Jennings, "I wanted to meet him face to face. I fully intended to kill him, but I wanted him to see me first and know why and by whose hand he died."

When they went on the trail of Houston and Love the Jennings brothers made their headquarters at the old Spike S ranch in the Creek nation. There they were thrown in with a band of outlaws, but did not become a part of the band until they had been charged by the territorial officers with participating in a train robbery which they have always declared they knew nothing about. They were hunted and joined the outlaws for protection.

Falsely Accused of Robbery

Jennings' story of how he came to join his "long riders" as the outlaws were called, is as follows:

"One evening I went to my father's house at Tecumseh, and he told me I was accused of train robbery. I convinced him of my innocence, but he insisted that I face my accusers. As I could not prove an alibi, we had some heated words and I rode away.

"I slept out that night and the next morning went to Seminole to get some breakfast. Standing around the general store were several men with revolvers. I knew they were either deputy United States marshals or horse thieves. In those early days there was hardly any way to distinguish between them.

"I bought some cheese and crackers, which I ate while the men stood around and watched me. Then I mounted my horse and rode quietly away. When I was a hundred yards away the officers and the merchant opened fire on me, killing my horse and wounding me. The horse fell on me, but I extricated myself and returned the fire. I put so many bullets close to them that they fled to the timber. I limped back to the store, frenzied with madness and believing the whole world was against me. Laboring under that belief I committed the first crime against the law. I robbed the store of $27.50 out of pure revenge. I took one of the horses hitched near by and rode to the Spike S ranch, fifty-five miles away, where I arrived after nightfall.

Became a "Long Rider"

"I told the men at the ranch my story, and they were glad of it. These men had long wanted my brother and myself to join them, and now they knew we were with them. Well, we joined tne "Long Riders" and for two years we were as wild as March hares. It was a wi'd, reckless country, filled with outlaws, but we were the wildest of them all. We stopped short only of murder. We drew the line there, all of us, and that is more than can be said of many of the outlaws in the territory at that time.

"Bands of deputy marshals hunted us day in and day out, but we had reason to believe that for months they did not want to find us. In October, 1897, five of us stopped the southbound train on a siding between Minco and Chichasa. We attempted to rob the express car and failed. Then we ordered everybody out on the right of way, lining them up against the fence, where we robbed them.

"During the next two months things were awfully hot. Hundreds of men and officers were scouring the woods. Finally, December 1, we rounded up at the Spike S ranch, staying all night. About 9 o'clock the next morning Mrs. Harless' brother went to the well at the barn for water. He stayed so long that Mrs. Harless went after him, but she soon returned, rushing into the house and exclaiming:

"'You are all surrounded and will be killed!'

"Then she grabbed her little brother and fled through the door. Just as she got outside the first volley was fired and dozens of bullets went crashing through the house. I was standing by the kitchen window and got a bullet above the left knee. Probably four hundred shots were fired there and finally we left the house, runing to a small peach orchard. There we made another stand and silenced our pursuers.

"We escaped by wading Duck creek and then went into the mountains. Three of us were wounded. My brother Frank had twenty-two bullet holes through his clothing, but he was not injured.

Betrayed by a Supposed Friend

"Eventually we arrived at the home of a friend, where we were fed and our wounds dressed. A horse thief by the name of Sam Baker came to us there and said we had killed three officers. He advised us to get away as a large posse was coming, he said. We afterwards learned we had not killed any one.

"Baker loaded us into his wagon under the pretense of being our friend, and started us on the road to Arkansas. About 3 o'clock the next morning we learned that Baker had betrayed us when we drove into the ambuscade that had been set for us by the officers. The road had been barricaded and we were surrounded. We were captured and taken to the federal jail at Muscogee. I was tried and convicted of robbing the United States mail, which I did not do, and sentenced for the period of my natural life.

"I went to the penitentiary at Columbus, O., and through the instrumentality of the late Senator Mark Hanna and friends in Oklahoma my life sentence was commuted to five years. I was eventually pardoned by President Roosevelt.

"I went back to Oklahoma and located at Lawton, where I began once more the practice of law. In the meantime I married and it is to my wife's great influence that I owe much of my success. It has been my determination to build up again and get back if possible to the place where by nature I belong. No man will ever know, though, the thousand obstacles in the pathway of the man who is endeavoring to fight his way back from the black past unless he has tried it. Some time ago I gave up the law, and then, last fall, I was a candidate for governor of Oklahoma. I was unsuccessful, but I am not discouraged. If I can accomplish nothing more than to make society relent a little in its attitude toward those who have erred, if I can only get people to give the man who is trying to come back a chance, then I shall feel that I have done some good in the world. I like the Golden Rule as Confucius taught it, "Do not do to others what you would not like if done to yourself.'"

FINE FIESTA MUSIC

One of the charming features about the Fiesta of Fruits and Flowers is the splendid music given at intervals throughout the afternoon, at the exhibit of Fruits and Flowers, under the direction of Mrs. Freeman Kelly. The combination of the beautiful plants and flowers with the music is specially pleasing.

Yesterday afternoon Miss Gertrude Champlain, the well-known pianist, gave a splendid selection from the opera "Lucia di Lammermoor," displaying wonderful technique and brilliancy; then Master Isaiah Sinclair, a pupil of Mr. Julius Kranz, the violinist, gave two charming numbers, accompanied by his teacher, who had every reason to be proud of his pupil. A splendid musical future is predicted for this child who showed marvelous ability.

The vocal numbers consisted of duets by Mrs. J. H. Orth and Mrs. F. W. Pigg, also Mrs. Calvin Whiting and Mrs. Frank Gillis of Pasadena, which were simply charming. Their voices were blended beautifully and their selections were well chosen for the occasion. The whole program was delightful.

KERN RIVER OIL FIELD MAPS JUST OUT

Congressman Charles H. Randall of Highland Park has received a supply of maps of the Kern River oil fields, just issued by the United States geological survey. These maps are the most elaborate ever issued of this field, showing wells, tanks, reservoirs, etc. The contour is 20 feet and the scale is 5½ inches to the mile. Mr. Randall will be glad to supply copies to oil men.

C. H. WOOLSEY EXPRESSES APPRECIATION

On exhibition at the flower show is a very elaborate horseshoe of red and white carnations presented to Mrs. Mattison B. Jones as president of the Tuesday Afternoon club by C. H. Woolsey of the Flower Shop in appreciation of the club's work in putting through Glendale's first flower show, which is one of the biggest and best ever held in Southern California. This means more shows and an increased interest in floriculture and the members of the club are to be commended for their untiring service along this line.
